Paul Coleman Joins Clearwater to Lead System Architecture

BOISE, Idaho — August 6, 2019 — Clearwater Analytics announced today that Paul Coleman has joined the firm as Chief Architect.

Paul will guide large-scale architectural initiatives for Clearwater’s SaaS solution with a focus on scalability and performance. This new role will accelerate successful business outcomes for current and future clients as Clearwater continues to achieve growth and global expansion.

Clearwater is a leading web-based investment accounting and reporting solution providing portfolio book-of-record accounting, daily investment policy compliance monitoring, performance tracking, risk analytics, and a variety of buy-side tools for insurers, investment managers, corporations, and other institutional investors.

“Clearwater has built an impressively fast-growing and highly sought-after SaaS solution with a forward-thinking development team,” Paul said. “I’m looking forward to working with the team on projects that gracefully scale and deliver a high-quality experience for our clients.”

Paul brings 25 years of software-building experience to Clearwater. He most recently served as Chief Architect at Teradata and has also held engineering roles at a number of large technology companies including Amazon, Microsoft, and BlueKai.

“I’m confident Paul’s wealth of experience in transforming software solutions combined with Clearwater’s in-house expertise will produce exciting results for our clients,” said Clearwater Chief Executive Officer Sandeep Sahai.
